The Need for Expression

A prospect of civilization that has left quite an indelible mark on modern society is the suppression of basic human instincts in exchange for collective peace and communal development. However, this practice can project a dire outlook—with humanity pressing its carnal nature under the yoke of progress and collective welfare. It is important to note that humans possess a will, an ego and if this very ego, the primal instincts of man are incarcerated behind the gates of civilization—though it has its benefits—it can tamper with the emotional stability of the mind and wreck its conscience. The very thought, or emotion trapped inside will burgeon into something abominable, something despicable, which will cut right through the social fabric of a systematized societal framework. Hence, the need to vent out our emotions is ever increasing in the modern world especially in a society that values self-discipline and sacrifice. It is important not to overlook or undermine this blatant truth which paints itself on to the canvas of reality, but to encourage art whether it be in the shape of painting, sketching, sculpting, literature, theatre or cooking in civilization to act as a vent, which is a somewhat justifiable means of creative expression.

LUMINA 6.0

JT LUMINA is among JT's finest Science and Business Olympiads. This year's Lumina unveiled itself relishing a glamorous new makeover resonating perfectly with this year's Nuclear Fallout theme. With three categories and twelve piquant sub-events, Lumina 6.0 was indeed a culmination of all previous editions and a testament for the future. Ranging from the ever enthralling 'Fanaticus' to the more strenuous 'Euler's Last Stand,' delegates were impressed with a wholesome experience. Whether it be gaming enthusiasts or medical aficionados, business cousinneuers or MUN fanatics, Lumina got everyone covered. Day one treated delegates with an invigorating Bayaan concert and day two saw an intellectual discourse on nuclear energy. One thing could be said for sure, that Lumia 6.0, Fallout edition will stand as a rightful paradigm for the Lahore circuit to emulate. Hats off to the executive council, the senior management and all those who made this event possible.

Artography '24

Artography is the annual testament to the determination of the O level Art council. This exhilarating event spanned an unforgettable weekend, thrilling delegates from all over Lahore in a competitive fun filled art tournament. The exuberating Dance, Music and Drama performances which kept the crowd in a chokehold, Magnificent Art works in the Art and Media categories and thrilling quest of Artisan's Odyssey had everyone entertained. Except for the Categories and the awe-striking concert, the environment of Artography 2024 had the perfect balance of peace, serenity and spontaneous fun. The end result of the event was best shown by the massive Graffiti board delegates rushed to paint. In the end, LGS 55 Main proved their dominance once more and took home the Best Delegation, but the runners up, LGS OPF, was not far behind. But, whether someone went home with a trophy or not, they surely did have a very fulfilling weekend.

LUMUN Junior Best Delegation

LGS JT sent a delegation to LUMUN, the biggest and the most competitive MUN of this season. After an arduous four days of executing refined diplomatic skills, we are proud to announce that we won the prestigious Best Young Delegation award. Our boys showcased refined diplomatic and speaking skills coupled with sheer dedication and a clear vision to win the event. A special shout out to Ayan Kamran, Ibrahim Jabran, Reza, and Saad Qutab for their outstanding performances and awards, which contributed to this incredible victory.

Shogran trip:

The outgoing O level batch had the opportunity to go for an excursion to the picturesque Shogran valley. Indeed, the trip was more exciting than was anticipated, and the boys had the experience of a lifetime. From the accommodation to the activities and transportation, all was efficiently planned and diligently included in an economical package. The school thought well to fuel up the energy of the eleventh graders to ensure that they would return with a spirit anew in order to work with zeal to conquer the academic challenges that lay ahead of them with ease.

LACAS Burki MUN '24

In an outstanding display of teamwork, preparation, and intellect, LGS JT emerged victorious at the LACAS Burki LUMUN, bagging the prestigious Best Delegation Award by a remarkable margin. The dedication and perseverance of the students shone brightly as they dominated the competition, securing victories in 5 out of the 7 committees. A Special Mention goes to our juniors, who stepped up with confidence and delivered stellar performances, showcasing immense potential and a bright future for our team. Their contributions were crucial to this achievement, adding depth and vigour to our delegation. Congratulations to everyone for this well-deserved success!

LAMUN '24

The JTMUN Society continued its tradition of success, securing the Junior Best Delegation Award at LAMUN 2024. Our younger team exhibited remarkable composure, intelligence, and collaboration, excelling in the competition and distinguishing themselves from other participants. This triumph underscores the commitment and training of our junior delegates, who dedicated themselves to representing our school admirably. Their impressive contributions to various committees exemplify the promising aptitude and bright prospects of LGS JT. Congratulations to our outstanding alumni on this noteworthy accomplishment!

more than just a trophy—it is a celebration of resilience and the unyielding spirit of LGS JT. Congratulations to the entire team for this historic accomplishment and for bringing the glory back home!

55 MUN '24

After five years, LGS JT has reclaimed its rightful place at the top, securing the prestigious Best Delegation Award at 55 MUN VI 2025. This remarkable victory marks the revival of our school's legacy, achieved through hard work and perseverance.

The delegation shone brightly across all committees, delivering powerful performances that left a lasting impression. This win is

World Scholar's Cup '24

A proud moment for LGS JT Senior Boys at the 2024 World Scholar's Cup held at Yale University from November 14th to 19th, with 70 countries participating! We earned an impressive number of 12 gold and 5 silver medals, securing 27th and 29th positions in collaborative writing along-with incredible achievements across debating, collaborative writing, scholar bowl, performing arts, and socials. It was a true testament to their hard work, talent, and teamwork! Well done boys!

Gramma Fest '24

LGS JT's Sports Society participated in Grammafest, hosted by LGS OPF, delivering outstanding performance and proudly securing the prestigious Best Delegation Award. Their remarkable teamwork, dedication, and excellence across various sports truly set them apart. We couldn't be prouder of our boys!

GTIMUN '24

A team consisting entirely of boys from O levels hoisted the JT flag on Beacon House Liberty's flagship Model United Nations conference. Competing with numerous schools from all over Lahore our passionate orators showed everyone once again that JT never falters in completion, no matter how challenging it may be. The ninth and tenth graders won five Honourable Mentions and one Special Mention. Two best delegate awards were won by Abdullah Gillani and Adil Imran.

Aitchison Swimming Festival

At the Aitchison Swimming Carnival 2024, our students achieved remarkable success, earning medals in various age categories: Mustafa Nazir from 10-A won a bronze medal in the 50 Meters Backstroke for the Under-14 category. Hassan Ali Babar from 11-E earned bronze medals in both the 50 Meters and 100 Meters Freestyle events for the Under-16 category. M. Abdullah from 10-G, along with his teammates, won a bronze medal in the 450 Meters Freestyle Relay.

A Sacred Symbiosis

By: Wahaj Ali

The sanctity of our environment must be utterly respected, and on a practical scale, paid heed to with one's utmost capabilities. The environment is defined as the surroundings or conditions in which a person, animal, or plant lives or operates. The solemn respect for the environment surpasses our traditional view concerning it with being vulnerable to human influence and emphasizes the importance of its nuanced characteristics that are intricately integrated into the valuable framework of its practical usefulness. It is undoubtedly an asset, whose ascendency over the much-ascribed quality of a tainted portrayal of a fallacious argument that we normally present, cannot be outrightly vitiated.

Practices leading to the sustainable development of available generative resources, particularly their constructiveness and practicality, pose a major hurdle to tackle. The efforts one is required to dispense to fulfil the requirements of a placid framework represent a heated concern posed to the present age. Negligence to the purpose-oriented effort for the utilization of available and potential natural and man-made benefactors presents itself as a demeaning situation in which one is unable to safeguard what is distinctly entrusted to oneself. This distinction blooms as a gratification of human intellectual capabilities and one's universal human pre-potency.

A better portrayal of the aforementioned remarks would be through the understanding of the interconnection between human ability and the presence of selective resources most appropriate for development. There is a diversity of income-generative resources of whose credence there is not a speck of doubt. But the point of concern that stands vulnerable to succumbing to the potential dereliction of duty is capital. When considering a developing or an underdeveloped nation, it is highly likely to imagine that capital would be spent on the basic needs of the population rather than squandering the state finances on what I would rightly refer to as 'second-hand luxuries.' This is a mind-set unworthy of any country wishing to furnish its prospective flair in a skill-set, facilitating the burgeon of its economy.

Practices on the conservancy of culture and heritage are essential requirements, having a dire need to be inculcated into the social fabric of society helping to foster inclusivity within its domain. The World Tourism Organization (WTO) defines sustainable tourism as: "tourism that takes full account of its current and future economic, social and environmental impacts, addressing the needs of visitors, the industry, the environment and host communities." A unique approach namely 'targeted tourism' can be endorsed, which aims at prioritising the development of the most commonly visited tourist destinations. Historical attractions are a trademark of the reserved individuality of preserved history, that is reflected through its existential proofs and footprints.

A more naturalistic viewpoint is that of an environment free from the shackles of human intervention. It can be well depicted through renewable resources and the benefits that can be derived from them. Water, for instance, is not only the source of life but also an undeniable asset through which power is harnessed. This can be in numerous forms, including hydroelectricity. Dams can, without any hint of doubt, have a multifaceted portrayal, which is an important aspect of viewing the economy from a sustainable perspective. This extends to dams having the potential to produce electricity, store water in their reservoirs, serve as fishing centres, and function as tourist resorts. Solar panels and windmills must be set up to cope with rapid industrialization and, most importantly, the boon in population that has skyrocketed.

Therefore, it can be confidently asserted that preserving the integrity of the environment transcends mere involvement with the complexities of its delicate structure. It is about honouring its purity through dedicated conservation efforts and nurturing its fundamental architecture, which benefits not only our current generation but also those yet to come.

Faculty:

Imran Khaliq

1-How would you like to introduce yourself?

My name is Imran Khaliq, I hold a master's degree in English from Punjab University, which I completed in 2004. Initially, I planned to pursue a career in law. While I was waiting for my results, I tried teaching temporarily, and the overwhelming positive feedback from students and colleagues completely changed my perspective. Over the years, I have worked as an English teacher, trainer, and O-level head at prestigious institutions, and I continue to dedicate myself to inspiring and educating students while constantly pushing myself for growth in my field.

2- How has been your experience of joining LGS JT?

Joining LGS JT has been a profoundly rewarding experience. The school's rigorous admission process ensures a high standard of students, making teaching a genuinely gratifying endeavour. Moreover, the supportive management and collaborative culture have made my time here not only productive but also deeply enjoyable.

3- What are your thoughts on the students in LGS JT?

The students in LGS JT are disciplined, and highly motivated. They make learning in a class really exciting, full of meaning to their academic as well as personal development. Their behaviour, inquisitiveness, and optimistic outlook depict the positive school culture.

4- What hobbies do you have, and what role do you think they have played in your personality?

My hobbies include reading extensively, and engaging in intellectually stimulating activities like debates. I also enjoy cricket, a sport I was deeply passionate about during my youth. These hobbies have played a pivotal role in shaping my personality by fostering self-improvement and building confidence.

5- What three words do you think your students would use to describe you?

Ambitious, supportive and understanding

6- Many of our readers have never been in the shoes of a real teacher. Could you share some of the hassles you face on a daily basis?

Teaching comes with its challenges. A teacher must create an engaging classroom atmosphere, adapt to varying student needs, and reflect on daily lessons to continuously improve. Providing an environment where students can actively participate not only lightens the mood but also reinforces their love for learning, making the experience valuable for both teacher and students.

7- Do you think that English is a subject that only aligns with those who are really passionate about it?

No, English is not a subject only for those passionate about it. It has become a global necessity, serving as a lingua franca and a crucial skill for academic and professional success. Top universities now consider SAT scores for admission, which rely heavily on English language proficiency. For students aiming to study abroad or excel in international careers, strong English skills are essential.

8- What are your suggestions to the students who are weak in English?

I feel that no one is weak by birth; everybody has potential. However, the environment unlocks that potential. If the environment is good and if the company is good enough, then that can help a student improve progress in their language skills.

9- How do you propose teachers should support students outside of school?

While many teachers limit their interaction with students to school hours, I believe that a student belongs to the teacher in the same way a child belongs to their parents. Being approachable and offering guidance beyond the classroom is essential for nurturing their growth and confidence.

10— Do you have anything you would like to say to our readers?

Life is short, beautiful, and should be lived truthfully. In this brief journey, we should strive to contribute to society in such a way that when we are gone, people remember us for the positive impact we made.

Parker: An Example of New Beginnings

Parker was known at his workplace as “the guy who messes up.” Whenever he walked into the office, his boss would sigh, his colleagues would whisper about him, and even the janitor would be upset. They all judged him on his first day. His first day was nothing less than a disaster. A client's file went missing, an email was sent to the wrong person, and the projector didn't work before one of the most important presentations of the year. The entire company blamed him and believed he brought bad luck to the company. Fortunately - or not so fortunately - Parker was on a one-year contract, due to which he couldn't be fired.

On that day, his fate was sealed. It didn't matter that the file wasn't his responsibility, or that the projector malfunctioned due to old wiring. He had ruined his impression in front of the entire company for the entire year. He started working harder - he would double-check before submitting emails and would stay up all night to complete his work. But, his efforts didn't matter. His boss always pinpointed all the minor mistakes within Parker's work and always gave his credit to other employees. He was fed up with this and started vividly recalling why he chose this job in the first place.

His father was on his deathbed, and told Parker, "You've got to move forward, son."

"I don't believe in new beginnings," he muttered to himself.

That evening, Parker went for a walk to grasp a breath of fresh air, in hopes of clearing his head. He sat on a bench in a quiet park, trying to contemplate his miserable life. An old man sitting nearby noticed Parker's frustration and struck up a conversation. "You look like you are carrying the weight of the world," he said. Parker was hesitant, but he opened up to the old man about his problems. The old man listened and then said something so simple yet powerful: "Asking for help doesn't mean you're weak. Sometimes, it's the strongest thing you can do." Those words struck Parker. Though slightly hesitant, Parker booked a therapist, from a part of his pay.

In his first session, the therapist said something to him that he never forgot:

"New beginnings aren't about forgetting the past. They're about building a better future."

"Yeah right, new beginnings," he repeated in a barely audible voice.

The next day, Parker delivered a flawless presentation. He finally thought his life was changing. But then, the boss applauded his co-worker, instead of acknowledging and appreciating his hard work. He had had enough! He packed his things, got on a train, and shifted to a new city.

Things were a little hard at the start - he stayed with a relative and found a low-paying job. But what gave him mental peace was that no one knew him as "the guy who messes up", and this stability of mind was what kept him going! He gave his best, and slowly things came into place - he was promoted as a manager and had a well-paying position. A few months passed by, and he went back to his therapist.

"You were right," he said with a small smile.

Parker walked out of the therapist's office and went by the park. The same old man was sitting on the bench again. He stopped, walked over, and said, "Thank you. Your advice saved me."

The old man smiled and replied in a faint voice:

"You saved yourself."

The Art of Doing Nothing—Embracing The Power of Stillness

In a society that glorifies the concept of 'going all hog', it would be right to state that the idea of doing nothing, might seem counterproductive or even lazy. Yet, the act of intentionally pausing—of allowing ourselves to simply exist—can be profoundly transformative. Doing nothing doesn't mean being idle; it means giving ourselves the space to recharge, reflect, and reconnect with our inner selves. In a world filled with constant notifications, deadlines, and expectations, moments of stillness can serve as a much-needed antidote to stress and burnout. Research shows that stepping away from the noise fosters creativity, enhances mental clarity, and improves overall well-being. Cultures around the world have long embraced the art of stillness. The Dutch practice of 'niksen'—literally "doing nothing"—encourages people to sit quietly without a specific purpose. Similarly, meditation and mindfulness practices in Eastern traditions emphasize being present in the moment, helping individuals find peace amid chaos. Stillness also provides an opportunity to observe the world with fresh eyes. Watching clouds drift lazily across the sky or listening to the rustle of leaves can remind us of life's simple pleasures. These moments of intentional pause allow us to reconnect with our surroundings and ourselves. In the rush to do more, we often forget that it's okay to do less—or nothing at all. By embracing stillness, we create room for growth, inspiration, and a deeper appreciation of life's beauty. So, the next time you feel overwhelmed, take a moment to pause. You might find that doing nothing is the most productive thing you can do.

The Importance of Balance between Studies and Hobbies

In today's fast-paced world, students often feel the pressure to excel in their studies. While education is important for building knowledge and achieving goals, focusing only on academics can lead to stress and burnout. This is why having a balance between studies and a hobby is so important.

Hobbies give students a chance to relax and explore their interests outside the classroom. Whether it's playing a sport, painting, gardening, or playing an instrument, hobbies allow the mind to recharge. They teach valuable skills, such as creativity, teamwork, and time management, which can be just as important as academic success. For example, a student who enjoys writing stories might develop communication skills, while another who plays football learns discipline and cooperation.

Balancing hobbies with studies also improves mental health. Spending all day studying can feel overwhelming, but taking breaks to do something enjoyable helps reduce stress and improve focus. It creates a routine where students are productive in their studies while also taking care of their emotional well-being. Moreover, hobbies can open doors to future opportunities. Some people turn their hobbies into careers, like a dancer becoming a choreographer or a gamer becoming a game designer. Even if that doesn't happen, hobbies still make life more fulfilling and enjoyable. To achieve this balance, students should manage their time wisely. Setting aside specific hours for studies and hobbies ensures that neither is neglected. Parents and teachers should encourage this balance, helping students understand that their worth is not defined by grades alone.

In the end, life is about more than just textbooks and exams. A balanced lifestyle teaches students how to work hard while still enjoying life. By embracing both studies and hobbies, the new generation can grow into well-rounded individuals who succeed not only in school but in life.

- Hassan Nauman 9G

Dilemma of Dreams

Everyone is destined for greatness. This perception is highlighted by individuals who have triumphed over misfortune like Steve Jobs, Michael Jordan, and many more. Jobs went on to revolutionize the technological world but was once abandoned and given up for adoption. Jordan was rejected from his high school basketball varsity team but eventually led the Chicago Bulls to six NBA championships. With enough perseverance and will, it is believed that anyone can overcome anything. This belief is instilled into people, who have similar experiences, making them follow their dreams.

The media's portrayal of the struggle, effort, consistency, and success of famous individuals develops a narrow tunnel vision, leading us to this delusional mindset. While these stories echo worldwide and, in our minds, the symphonies of the common folk's failures remain unheard. It is foolish to think that the common folk simply lacked effort and patience to not make it to the world stage, as success to that degree boils down to chance. Their absence from the limelight is a glaring indication of their existence. Coming across a tiny yet crucial detail for your business idea or being scouted for the national sports team, these events occur because they just "seemed to happen". It goes without saying there are hundreds of thousands, even millions, who put in the same effort, if not more, but were just unlucky enough to not get the extra edge. A hyped player on the big screen will always overshadow a smaller division player, irrespective of the latter's superior talent. Luck cannot be taken out of the equation as it is physically impossible to harness everything that can or will happen. If the possibility of becoming one of the unheard symphonies isn't etched into the chemistry of your brain, the disappointment can be even more profound. Yet, perhaps it's precisely that fire—the relentless passion—that keeps pushing you forward. Whether you settle for mediocrity with broken dreams or simply keep believing in pure effort, it does not matter. At the end experiences will mold you into a wiser person, who will begin to understand the complexities. How you deal with this analogy determines the philosophy you embody and the type of person you are going to be.

- Ali Warsi 11-G

The Journey

In the morning light, I start my day,
With dreams and hopes that lead the way.

The path is long, the road unknown,
But with each step, my courage has grown.

Friends by my side, we laugh and share,
Through ups and downs, we show we care.

Learning lessons, facing fears,
Growing stronger through the years.

The stars above, guide my night,
A shining beacon, a hopeful light.
Though challenges may come and go,
I'll keep moving, I'll learn and grow.

In this journey, I find my place,
With every challenge, I embrace.
For life is a story, a song to sing,
And I am ready for what it will bring

December 11, 1978

Shining upon the prism of green grass and freedom
Shining upon the stampede of those in black
Shining upon the pennants of hope held up high
And shining upon the once-blooming gardens of peace
Signalling a fateful day for those who knew.

The dawn had ordained for change to come.

Pounding down two millennia' worth of rubies and emeralds
Pounding down the transition, erupting into chaos
Pounding down the routes, swarmed with those in ta'zieh
And pounding onto the atrium of Shemiran's centre
Pounding upon the ordained customs of governing a nation

The sun was well past its zenith, to descend into change.

"Red paint all over the walls of the capital", reporters remarked,
"Planes winging in turmoil out of the nation", said they.
"Dignitaries in turbans rushing out to the Square, Chanting: send it overseas, so the world can see"
And then, without warning, a plane swoops in;
With the face of the act, stepping into a new realm

The eventide brushing orange from the Tower of Relief.

When I consider how my life is spent

When I consider how my life is spent,
The decisions made and paths I chose,
    Impacted my life and how it goes.
Though the future may be daunting to face,
    But let's give a long chase,

When I consider how my life is spent
    Before I know it, days are spent
        The choices I make in haste
            Affect my life and what I taste
In the end, I must make sure in my life all evil is erased

When I consider how my life is spent
    I ponder what I have accomplished
        The memories, both sweet and sour
            Of days gone by, some lost in hour
My life is ever changing, yet ever the same
    When I consider how my life is spent.

The Mangled Boy

In a town of whispers, there once was a boy,
With loving parents and a life full of joy.
But mother was lost on the day he was born,
And soon the boy's life would be twisted and torn.

Down to the theater, he skipped with a grin,
With father beside him, their talk thin and thin.
Into the alley, the shadows did creep,
Where danger and sorrow would soon start to seep.

An old man appeared, with eyes cold and gray,
"Give me your money, or you'll both have to pay."
Father said "no," but the gun made a sound,
And there, in the alley, his body hit ground.

The boy cried out, his heart full of dread,
Two strangers behind him, they wanted him dead.
A shot to the chest, a tear-filled goodbye,
The boy fell silent, and closed his small eyes.

A mad man arrived with tools in his hand,
"I'll fix you, my boy, with stitches and strands."
His head split in half, with wires stretched out,
His eyes dangled loosely, but he could still shout.

His limbs were extended to unnatural lengths,
Five meters of horror, with wires for strength.
The flesh held together by threads warped and torn,
A nightmare made flesh, from which dreams were shorn.

Awake, he rose, his heart full of pain,
Now more than a boy, forever in chain.
He searched for his father, but nothing remained,
Now the mangled boy wanders, cursed and unnamed.

So listen close, children, when the night's drawing near,
For the mangled boy walks, and he's always quite near.
With long, creeping limbs and eyes in the dark,
He's searching, forever, to find a lost spark.

سفر و سیلہ ظفر

سفر دراصل اس سرگرمی کا نام ہے جس سے انسان کو مختلف جگہوں پر جانے اور اس کے ساتھ ساتھ بہت کچھ سیکھنے کا موقع ملتا ہے۔ انسان دنیا میں ہر وقت سفر کرتا رہتا ہے پہلے زندگی میں آنے کا سفر پھر دنیا کا سفر اور پھر دنیا سے جانے یعنی موت کا سفر۔ سفر ظاہری طور پر ایک جگہ سے دوسری جگہ جانے کا نام ہے اور یہ انسانی زندگی میں خاصہ اہمیت کا حامل ہے۔

سیر و سیاحت آج کل ہر نوجوان بچے اور بوڑھے کا پسندیدہ شعبہ بن گیا ہے۔ سفر کے انسانی زندگی میں بہت سے فوائد بھی ہیں۔ سب سے پہلا فائدہ دلکش نظاروں کا دیدار ہے چونکہ یہ انسانی فطرت ہے کہ جب بھی وہ کوئی خوبصورت چیز دیکھتا ہے تو اس کے دماغ میں ایسے ایسے احساسات پیدا ہوتے ہیں جو دل کو آرام و سکون دیتے ہیں۔ اسی طرح جب بھی سفر کرتے ہیں تو خوبصورت جگہوں کا انتخاب ضرور کرتے ہیں تاکہ سفر کے دوران یہی آرام و سکون نصیب ہو۔ آج کل تقریباً ہر انسان ذہنی دباؤ کا شکار ہوتا جا رہا ہے اس دباؤ کی کتنی وجوہات ہیں جن میں سے کچھ خاندان کے مسائل نوکری کے مسائل یا پھر اپنی زندگی کے مسائل ہیں۔ زندگی کے یہ مسائل دن بہ دن بڑھتے جا رہے ہیں اور انسان ان میں جکڑتا جا رہا ہے یوں محسوس ہوتا ہے کہ وہ معاشرے کے مسائل میں قید ہو کر رہ گیا ہے۔ اگر انسان صرف دو دن کے لیے دنیا کی ساری مشکلات بھلا کر اکیلے یا اپنے خاندان کے ساتھ سیر پر نکل جائے تو ذہنی دباؤ مکمل طور پر ختم ہو سکتا ہے۔

سفر انسان کو تفریح اور خوشی فراہم کرتا ہے اور اسے اپنے لیے وقت نکالنے کا موقع دیتا ہے۔ یہ خود کو سمجھنے، اپنی قدر کرنے، اور اپنے وجود کو جاننے کا بہترین ذریعہ ہے۔ سفر انسان کو نا صرف مشکلات سے نکالنے میں مدد دیتا ہے بلکہ اللہ پر ایمان کو بھی مضبوط کرتا ہے۔ انسان کو یہ احساس ہوتا ہے کہ دنیا میں

اس کی آمد کا مقصد کیا ہے، اور اللہ کی اس خوبصورت کائنات کو دیکھ کرو وہ اللہ کی عظمت کو مزید سمجھتا ہے۔

اس کے علاوہ، جب بھی کوئی شخص سفر کرتا ہے، تو وہ تفریح کے ساتھ ساتھ ان نے لوگوں سے ملنے کا موقع بھی پاتا ہے، جو اس علاقے کے باسی ہوتے ہیں۔ اس طرح انسان مختلف ثقافتوں سے واقف ہوتا ہے اور ان کے بارے میں بہت کچھ سیکھتا ہے۔ نتیجتاً، ایک شخص کی معلومات میں اضافہ ہوتا ہے اور وہ انسانی نفسیات کو بہتر طور پر سمجھنے لگتا ہے۔ یہ سب سیکھنے سے انسان کے دل میں بھائی چارے کو فروغ ملتا ہے۔ وہ اپنے اختلافات کو بھلا کر ایک ہونے کا سوچتا ہے۔ اسے یہ سمجھ آتا ہے کہ خدا نے یہ زمین اس لیے نہیں بنائی کہ لوگ آپس میں فسادات کریں یا اختلافات کی بنیاد پر لڑائی جھگڑے کریں، بلکہ اس لیے بنائی ہے کہ انسان ایک دوسرے سے سیکھیں اور محبت کریں۔ زمین پر محبت، امن، اور ہم آہنگی کو فروغ ملے، اور دلوں میں کوئی خلاء نہ رہے۔ یہی وجہ ہے کہ سفر اتنا اہم ہے، کیونکہ یہ ہمیں نا صرف دنیا دیکھنے کا موقع دیتا ہے بلکہ زندگی کی گہرائیوں کو سمجھنے کا ذریعہ بھی بتاتا ہے

سے آئے ٹھہرے اور روانہ ہو گئے

زندگی کیا ہے سفر کی بات ہے

الغرض، سفر انسان کے لیے نا صرف تفریح اور سکون کا ذریعہ ہے بلکہ یہ اسے زندگی کے حقیقی معانی اور مقاصد سمجھنے کا موقع بھی فراہم کرتا ہے۔ یہ علم، تجربے، اور بھائی چارے کے فروغ کا بہترین وسیلہ ہے۔ سفر سے حاصل ہونے والے اسباق اور یادیں زندگی بھر ہمارے ساتھ رہتی ہیں اور ہمیں ہر مشکل کا سامنا کرنے کی ہمت دیتی ہیں۔

میری زندگی کا مقصد

ہر انسان کی زندگی میں کوئی نہ کوئی مقصد ہونا ضروری ہے کیونکہ مقصد ہی وہ چیز ہے جو انسان کو حینے کی وجہ فراہم کرتا ہے۔ میرے نزدیک زندگی کا مقصد صرف خود کی بہتری نہیں، بلکہ دوسروں کی بھلائی اور فلاح میں بھی پوشیدہ ہے۔

میری زندگی کا مقصد دوسروں کی مدد کرنا اور اپنے علم و تجربے سے دنیا کو بہتر بنانا ہے۔ تعلیم ایک بہت طاقتور چیز ہے جس کے ذریعے سے نہ صرف ہم خود کو بہتر بن سکتے ہیں بلکہ دوسروں کی زندگی میں بھی ثابت تبدیلی لاسکتے ہیں۔ میں یہ چاہتا ہوں کہ میں ایک ایسا انسان بنوں جو اپنے معاشرے کی فلاح و بہبود کے لیے کام کرے۔

تعلیم کے ذریعے میں نے یہ سیکھا کہ علم باٹھنے سے بڑھتا ہے اور دوسروں کی مدد کرنے سے دل میں سکون پیدا ہوتا ہے۔ زندگی کا اصل حُسن اسی میں ہے کہ ہم اپنی صلاحیتوں کا استعمال صرف اپنے لیے نہیں، بلکہ دوسروں کی بھلائی کے لیے بھی کریں۔

میری زندگی کا مقصد یہ ہے کہ میں ایک ایسا انسان بنوں جو لوگوں کی مشکلات کو کم کر سکے اور ان کے لیے ایک بہتر زندگی کا راستہ فراہم کر سکے۔ اس مقصد کے لیے میں نے ہمیشہ محنت کی ہے اور آگے بھی کرتا رہوں گا، تاکہ میری زندگی کا مقصد پورا ہو اور میں دنیا میں ایک ثابت تبدیلی پیدا کر سکوں۔

یہی وہ چیز ہے جو میری زندگی کو معنی دیتی ہے اور مجھے آگے بڑھنے کی طاقت فراہم کرتی ہے۔

ایک نئی شروعات: جے ٹی میں میرا پہلا دن

ایک نہ ختم ہونے والے موسم گرما کے بعد، اسکول آخر کار سیشن میں واپس آگیا۔ جوش اور اعصاب کے ایک طوفان نے مجھے بھر دیا جب میں نے ایک نئے باب میں قدم رکھا: گریڈ 9۔ میں نئے دوستوں سے ملنے، نئی کلاسز تلاش کرنے، نیا یونیفارم پہننے اور، سب سے اہم بات، سیکھنے اور دوسروں کے ساتھ بڑھنے کے سفر کو اپنانے کے لیے بے تاب تھا۔ دوستوں سے دوبارہ ملنے، گیم کھیلنے، اور روزمرہ کے معمولات میں غوطہ زن ہونے کی امید نے میرے دل میں امنگیں جگا دیں۔

تاہم، میں اس بے چینی کو دور نہیں کر سکا جو مجھ پر چھائی ہوئی تھی۔ میرے سینئر زنے اسکول کے سخت قوانین کی کہانیاں سنا کر، مجھے خبردار کیا کہ یہاں رہنا ایک چیلنج ہو سکتا ہے۔

جیسے ہی میں اسکول کے دروازے کے قریب پہنچا، میں اس کے متاثر کن فن تعمیر سے مرغوب ہوا۔ ایک خوش روپری یونیٹ نے میرا استقبال کیا اور میری کلاس روم میں رہنمائی کی۔ اپنے دوستوں کو اندر پا کر میرے جسم میں راحت اور خوشی کی ایک لہر دوڑ گئی۔ میں نے نئے طلباء سے بھی ملاقات کی، یہ محسوس کیا کہ وہ اگلے پانچ سالوں تک میرے ساتھی ہوں گے۔

اسکول کے دن کا آغاز گھنٹی بجنے سے ہوا۔ ہماری کلاس ٹیچر داخل ہوتیں، حاضری لگاتی، اپنا مختصر تعارف کروایا اور پھر باہر چلی گئیں۔ اس کے بعد باقی مضمایں کا آغاز ہوا۔ میرے لیے حیرت کی بات یہ تھی کہ اساتذہ اتنے سخت نہیں تھے جتنا مجھے ڈر تھا۔ درحقیقت اردو اور کمیسری کے اساتذہ خاصے پر جوش اور خوش گوار تھے۔
